Diomedes Hoos June 29th 1798.

Lap. G. 128

Sir

I have received your letter this day, and, in answer beg leave to state to their Lordships this account of the circumstance which has been so grossly misrepresented by West Evans - I was with Lieut. Pascoe walking down the street of Gravesend to take a boat to the Diomedes being just returned from Matham on Horseback, passing some women or rather, Girls, they made use of some Expressions which from their Indecent tenor, occasioned us to laugh, they turned into another Street, and, we going on, at some distance from the women passed a man who called out, "look at those two D- d fools," on which Lieut. Pascoe turned to him, and asked him what he said; and how he dared Insult gentleman without provocation, on which the man making use of the most abusive exortations, occasioned Lieut. Pascoe to say - I shall take you to the Rendezvous, and see how you are protected, that you are so insolent, at the same time taking him by the collar, in the way down the person came up who proved to be Mr Evans, and, by his clamorous and particularly, Inflammatory language raised a Mob who surrounded us, altho Lieut. Pascoe informed him of his intention which was to have the man convinced of the impropriety of his conduct, but Mr Evans would not allow him to pass and by much insult irritated Lieut. Pascoe, not reflecting on the rights of a corporation, which the other had in view, and, by repeated provoking interrogations whether he meant to keep the man, to such a Degree as to occasion his saying, yes I do, when Instantly Mr Evans called out "I charge the Constable with Lieut. Pascoe, and, as Instantly the Mob gave three cheers. It may here be observed I have been giving Mr Pascoe History and left my self and conduct unexplained, but as I really was no more concerned in this Business than by frequently reminding Lieut. Pascoe that he must not allow such treatment to get the better of his patience, and, that all these people wanted was to make him comedit himself, and, to irritate him to strike the man in order to prosecute him which was evidently, and, I firmly believe their intention, and, on their cheering I asked, much provoked at such outrage "if it did not do him Mr Evans great Good, which I could not refrain from as he kept continually declaring his determination to defend the rights of the Inhabitants, and, much to this Effect - I naturally went with Lieut. Pascoe to Capt Dunells where the Business was arranged as I supposed, never supposing Mr Evans had any thing to alledge against me tho he was personally more offended at my reproof - for his inflammatory rather than pacific interference which he himself declared by his observing, that I was very warm and treated him worse than Lieut Pascoe - This Sir is the substance of the affair as it is impossible to repeat every word that passed as well as improper to trouble their Lordships with a repetition of much unecessary language and oaths repeated by persons in such a situation, but give me leave to assure you that there is no circumstance or Expression omitted which could in any wise alter the inference to be drawn from what I have the Honour to state. I now only wish to observe and, to pray their Lordships will consider that there could be no culpability in my being at that Place on my return from Chatham to the Downs to visit a Brother, in the company of an officer very much respected walking quietly in the Street and not at all disturbing women (or) Inhabitants of the Town. or either Intemperately or Triumphantly demeaning myself - and I have the most through confidence that their Lordships will not suffer the exaggerated accounts of an affair by an Individual personally required, to be the condemnation and utter ruin of an officer whose character has been heretofore unstain'd on any occasion, and, who is already Honor'd with a Commission from their Lordships, and, whose study it ever has been to deserve such honours

I intercal your indulgence for having been thus prolix but the infinite consequence it must be of to me to convince their Lordships that the severe punishment with which I am threatened by them if I fail in my explanation is now unmerited will sufficiently excuse me -

To Evan Nepean Esq: Admiralty -

I have the honor to be Sir your most obedient servant J. G. Moore
